It looks for the moment as if the successful and contemporaneously with the southern Russian armies began their readvance upon Cracow. They are still upon an average fifty miles from that city. They have superior forces in front of them, and the Austrians still hold the crest of the passes of the Carpathians. threatening the flank of such an advance. None the less the advance is taking place, though slowly, and is taking place because the defense of Warsaw has hitherto been successful. Should that city fall it would be checked imme-diately.
